Commentary

Risk-on, risk-off strategies need periods of strong leadership from Treasuries relative to stocks in order to work effectively. In 2022, we've seen anything but. Since the December Fed meeting when Chair Powell indicated that the launch of a monetary tightening cycle was imminent, Treasury yields have been steadily on the rise even in the face of stock market declines. This environment of stocks and bonds generating negative returns at the same time has made conditions especially challenging for this fund. High volatility, the use of leverage and the underperformance of both small-caps and emerging markets have all contributed to make this past quarter a disappointing one.

We remain hopeful that the potential of inflation cooling later this year, an eventual resolution to the Russia/Ukraine conflict and the return of more traditional intermarket relationships can provide the catalyst for positive performance. Economic risks remain high and the possibility of a recession in the not-so-distant future looms, but we feel confident that these are the kinds of conditions that this fund could take advantage of.

Absolute return strategies are not intended to outperform stocks and bonds during strong market rallies

Mutual fund investing involves risk. Principal loss is possible. Because the Fund invests primarily in ETFs, it may invest a greater percentage of its assets in the securities of a single issuer and therefore is considered non-diversified. If a Fund invests a greater percentage of its assets in the securities of a single issuer, its value may decline to a greater degree than if the fund held were a more diversified mutual fund. The fund is expected to have a high portfolio turnover ratio which has the potential to result in the realization by the Fund and distribution to shareholders of a greater amount of capital gains. This means that investors will be likely to have a higher tax liability. Because the Fund invests in Underlying ETFs an investor will indirectly bear the principal risks of the Underlying ETFs, including but not limited to, risks associated with investments in ETFs, large and smaller companies, real estate investment trusts, foreign securities, non-diversification, high yield bonds, fixed income investments, derivatives, leverage, short sales and commodities. The Fund will bear its share of the fees and expenses of the underlying funds. Shareholders will pay higher expenses than would be the case if making direct investments in the underlying funds.

The Fund's investment objectives, risks, charges, expenses and other information are described in the statutory or summary prospectus, which must be read and considered carefully before investing.
